Blue Valley North library honored

Strong collaboration with classroom teachers is one important reason why the Blue Valley North library has been honored with the American Association of School Librarians National School Library Media Program of the Year award.

The National School Library Media Program of the Year honors school library media programs practicing their commitment to ensure that students and staff are effective users of ideas and information. The award recognizes exemplary school library media programs that are fully integrated into the school's curriculum. Each winning program receives $10,000, donated by Follett Library Resources. Blue Valley North is one of two schools winning the award this year.

"Our library media specialists are teachers who collaborate with other teachers to provide our learners with the skills and resources necessary to ensure academic achievement and personal growth," said Linda Corey, district coordinating teacher for library media. "Strong administrative support provides the framework for the collaborative work."
